Reflection

of the Gospel

One day I can remember speaking with one of my uncles. All four of my mother's brothers fought in World War II. All four of them came back home alive. One of them, though, was a prisoner of war for three-and-a-half years in Japan. He was in the Baton March, and he was one of the few who survived that march. He rarely spoke of the war. I asked him one time, when I was in college, what it was like. At that time the Vietnam War was going on. There were all sorts of questions around that war, so I wanted to know what it was like in World War II.

The gist of what he said was, "There is no glory in war. No matter how just the cause may be, war is always horrific, even when you are trying to battle evil and you are on the side of good. To kill another human being is never easy. To hold a fallen comrade in your arms is never easy. There is always a darkness to war."

War should always remind us of the call the Lord gives to us in the Gospel, to be people who work for peace, to be people who work for the right ordering of society, for the ordering of society according to the plan of God, not according to the plan of man. The only way that there will ever be peace within our world is if all peoples are converted to the message of Jesus Christ, if our hearts and minds are transformed to live our lives according to God's plan and not our plans. We must constantly propose the truth of the Gospel to the world, inviting them to come to know Jesus Christ. When we honor the dead and those who have gone before us, we, too, remember the tremendous sacrifices they have made. We remember how many of them have been scarred for life whether physically or emotionally.

My sisters and brothers, we must ponder in our hearts, "What would Jesus Christ do in the midst of the world in which we live today?" Jesus Christ would stand for a culture of life. He would call us to conversion and repentance. He would call us to be faithful to the Gospel. He speaks to us still, "I came that you might have life and life abundantly. I am the way, the truth and the life." Life is Jesus' gift to us. By Bishop Samuel J. Aquila
