Reflection

Mother Teresa has beautiful quotes that come from the heart and goes to the heart. She said one day: "Love is a fruit in season at all times, and within reach of every hand." She has experienced Love in her life, the love of Christ and the love of the people. But she also experienced the love that people give to one another. And surprisingly, it is not among the rich that she discovered love but among the poor. The best quality of love is not a matter of money. Some have money and some don't. And those who do not have money know sometimes more how to love.

Love was created in order to be given not be kept. God loves us so much that He gave his Son. But in our Gospel for this Sunday, Jesus speaks about love and love for one another, love that gives life, hope and builds community. Love is the engine to transform our world, to open the heart of the people and to bring God's message to them. Our Church was built because the first Christians tried to live this commandment. They drew people to Christ through their testimony of love for one another. In the world today, there are still people to bring to Christ. The Church continues God's mission in this world which is to reveal God's love. There are many ways to do it. One of the most important one and the most needed today is to love one another.
